original success of the Older Americans Resource Survey (OARS) for the aged thus by the creation of separate department agencies to deal with different needs of a single population group. This is the Administration on Aging. Since 1965, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, it operates independently of the Social Security Administration (which administers the Old Age and Survivors Benefit) along with the Supplementary Security Income program. It is of course separate from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Labor, and Agriculture, all of which have programs directly affecting the elderly. The Veterans Administration, which administers care for many elderly veterans, has various veteran benefit programs. Congress failed to grant sufficient resources to the Administration on Aging to carry out its responsibilities. The OARS has not been related to the OARS, housing, employment, recreation, retirement, community center services, which would be available to the elderly.
